Talk 1

"How NHS Data Can Improve Care"

Prof Paul Aylin

*Professor of Epidemiology and Public
Health, Imperial College
London*

Paul studies routinely collected NHS data to understand how care is delivered and where it can be made safer. His work has included the Bristol Royal Infirmary Inquiry, the Shipman Inquiry, and major studies on weekend hospital care and the August junior doctor changeover.

Talk 2

"What NCIC Data Can Show Us About Patient Flow in Cumbria"

Dr Walter Muruet -Gutierrez

Postdoctoral Researcher, Imperial College London

Walter has analysed NCIC data to show how patients travel to and use local services, with a focus on emergency and maternity care. His work helps reveal where pressures and delays arise, and how services might be organised more effectively to improve patient flow and support local analytical capacity in Cumbria.
